Terms and Conditions

These Terms and Conditions govern your use of the PhishSCAN platform, including the web application, browser extension, and backend API services. By accessing or using the system, you agree to comply with the provisions set forth below. Users who do not agree with these terms are advised not to use the service. PhishSCAN is an educational and demonstrative tool designed primarily for academic purposes and cybersecurity awareness. While the system makes every effort to provide accurate results, no security technology can guarantee complete accuracy. As such, users should not rely solely on PhishSCAN for critical security decisions. Users are granted permission to access the service for personal, academic, or research use. Commercial deployment, resale, or redistribution of the platform without prior written consent is strictly prohibited. Any attempt to exploit the service for malicious activities, such as validating phishing campaigns, is considered a violation of these terms and may result in legal consequences. The accuracy of the system depends on multiple factors, including the availability of external blacklists, the quality of heuristic features, and the limitations of machine learning models. PhishSCAN does not accept responsibility for damages or losses that may result from false positives, false negatives, or service outages. The system may undergo updates and modifications without prior notice. These updates are intended to improve performance, security, and usability. Continued use of the platform following an update implies acceptance of the revised terms. PhishSCAN reserves the right to suspend or terminate user access in cases of misuse, violation of acceptable use policies, or detected attempts at system compromise. These Terms and Conditions are governed by the applicable laws of New South Wales, Australia. Any disputes arising from the use of this system shall be resolved within the jurisdiction of the courts located in Sydney, NSW. By continuing to use PhishSCAN, you acknowledge that you have read, understood, and agreed to these Terms and Conditions in their entirety.
